Captain Tom Raises Millions

A 99-year-old Second World War veteran has raised millions for the NHS. By Thursday morning, he had raised over £12 million!

Tom Moore, also known as Captain Tom, wanted to do 100 laps of his garden before his 100th birthday.

Captain Tom wanted to show support for NHS workers as they help people in need. For over a week, he's done ten laps a day of his garden every day.

At first, Captain Tom wanted to raise £1000. But, people heard about what he was doing and started giving money. The money kept increasing. When it reached £2.5 million, Tom said, "Never in my wildest imagination did I think this would be possible."

On Wednesday evening, he'd raised £4 million. A message said, "WOW!... cannot wait to tell Tom the news in the morning."

Captain Tom wanted to finish the challenge on 30th April. But, he finished earlier than expected on 16th April. The moment was on live TV!

Tom has been raising money for the NHS Charities Together. Ellie Horton, from the group, said they were "humbled by Captain Tom and what he's achieved."

Today's story comes as people are showing support for each other. In the UK, every Thursday at 8 p.m., people have gone to their windows to clap NHS workers.

Children have been painting pictures of rainbows and putting teddy bears in windows to spread joy. 750 000 adults in the UK have become NHS volunteers, who will help vulnerable people with different jobs.
